Reading questions #15
Due Wed, June 24

1) Read Charles Mills "But what are you really?". Think about the problem cases 1-10 that he describes on pages 55-66. Create a chart that contains your judgment of the person's race in each of the 10 cases. Sample answers could be things like 'white', 'black', 'mixed race', 'no race', 'I am really not sure about this one', etc. For each answer, say in a sentence why you answered the way you did. For example, in case I, you might say "he is really white since his skin is so light" or you might say "he is really black since he self-identifies as black."

If you think that there are no such things as races, say what you think the majority answer of your classmates or other people in the US would be. It is fine to say to one or two cases "this person doesn't have a race because..." but don't say that for every answer.

2) After reading the article, come up with a question that you want answered or a topic that you would like to be discussed. This could be something that the article forced you think about or it could be something that you thought was particularly confusing in the article.
